

SWANS ON LAKE KEPT VIGIL BY A DEAD CHILD

Baby's Body Floated in Box
Two Days and the Birds
Would Not Leave It.

Guarded for twenty-four hours by a convoy of water fowl before it was found on the lake in Central Park, the body of a baby was discovered, and is at the morgue to-day awaiting identification.

The infant was floating in a little box, and thousands of persons saw the two swans and half a dozen early feathered ducks strolling about yesterday. The swans kept within a few feet of it all the time, while the ducks never went far away. There was something strange in the action of the fowl, and many park frequenters wondered what it might be they were so intently and solemnly watching. There were scores of rowboats on the lake, but none ventured close to the little box around which the ducks and swans were swimming.

Somebody told Thomas Donohue, keeper of the park water birds, of the queer actions of his beautiful charges, and he got in a boat and rowed out to where they were. The swans and ducks at first made ready to offer resistance as he drew near, but he spoke to them, and they knew him. Then he pushed his boat up to the little box, and was astonished at what he saw. The baby was evidently about a week old, and had, Lieut. Modier, of the Arsenal police station, been dead two days.

Donohue says his swans and ducks had persisted in staying on the lake all of last time.

After the baby was removed from the lake the birds, tired out by their long vigil, went to their quarters and to sleep.

The police are trying to find out how the box and the body got in the water.

RUNAWAY HORSE JUMPS ABOARD A TROLLEY CAR

Passengers Get a Scare, While Six Persons in Carriage Are Injured.

Passengers on a southbound Webster avenue trolley car were terror-stricken late last night when a runaway horse, dragging a surrey in which were six persons, jumped part way within the car, its forefeet resting on a seat. The horse was driven by David Goodfriend, of No. 203 Ashburton avenue. It took fright at a New York Central train and bolted.

Car and runaway, going in opposite directions, met near Two Hundred and Twenty-second street. The motorman put on the brakes when the horse leaped aboard, but the carriage was overturned and wrecked.

Passengers climbed out of reach of the horse's hoofs and escaped injury.

All of the six occupants of the carriage were stunned. Goodfriend had cuts on head and body. Morris Goldsmith, of No. 223 Ashburton avenue, suffered from probable internal injuries and from contusions. Harold and Samuel Goldsmith were out about the face and body. Samuel Goodfriend, nine, received severe lacerations.

The injured were attended by an ambulance surgeon from Fordham Hospital. The horse was destroyed, so badly was it injured.

LA TOURAINE BRINGS SPECIE.

day from Havre, brought $74,000 in
